PIOCHE SYSTEM OF MINING. -The Salt Lake Tribune, commenting on the prefatory remarks of a late Mining Review

in the RECORD, says: There are probably several mining districts in Utah fully equal, if not superior to the Ely District in the number of rich and permanent veins of the precious and permanent veins of the practous metals, as yet known only in name, or but partially developed, partly from want of time and capital, and partly from a lack of intelligent and systematic workresults. Many of our Utah miners would be surprised at the Pioche system of prospecting. The only mines located there as yet are in quartzite. If the prospector discovers a streak at or near prospector discovers a streak at or near the surface, be it ever so narrow, if it carries silver, though assaying low, the work of sinking begins with the expectation of "striking the ledge" within 200 feet. The enterprise is, as a rule, successful. The Piochers understand the theory and practice of mining.

WHEN an Arab widow intends marrying again she goes the night before the ceremony to pay a visit to the grave of her first husband. There she kneels, and prays him not to be offended. The widow brings with her a donkey laden with two goats skins of water. The prayer ended, she proceeds to pour the water upon the grave, and having well saturated it, she
